About the Centre

Pardes Shalom Cemetery is home to the Sidney and Dawn Freedman Memorial Centre. Proudly opened in 2017, it is a gathering place for friends and family to assemble in support of one another as they remember loved ones.

Architectural design

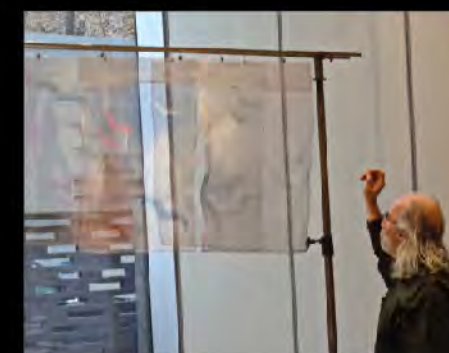

Designed by Canadian architect [Name], the Centre draws on the architectural style of Frank Lloyd Wright, with stone, glass, and wood. The interior is a light and bright structure, featuring a large open space, a Kohanim room, allowing for serene experiences of Halachic traditions.

Flight

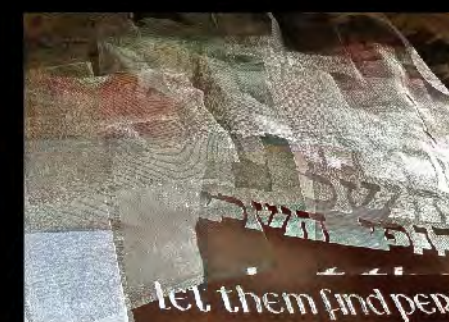

The centrepiece of our Assembly Hall is Flight, a sculptural art installation by esteemed Canadian artists Temma Gentles and William Roddy.

Mindful of the sacred in a space for commemorating life

The thematic keynote of the installation is a phrase from the memorial prayer El Malei Rachamim, wishing for the souls of the dead to find peace in God's nurturing presence.

Set against a backlit window, the artwork's layers of near transparency create a contemplative and healing aesthetic through silhouettes of birds in flight.

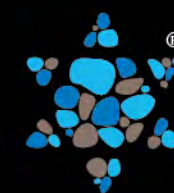

Nature

The building is situated in a naturally healing setting, spanning 89 acres and including an arboretum. Inside, windows reveal picturesque views of nature, evoking the sacred. Mourners can look and project outward, taking solace in the peaceful landscape.

Architectural design

Designed by Canadian architect David Fujiwara, the Centre draws on the architecture of Frank Lloyd Wright, with stone, glass, and wood enlivening its interior. A light and bright structure, it includes a Kohanim room, allowing for separate but inclusive experiencing of Halachic tradition.

Gathering in remembrance

The Memorial Centre houses the William and Judi Draimin Assembly Hall for those who are grieving and remembering. It is a place to gather and feel the comfort of togetherness in reverence to those we have lost. It can be rented for funerals, graveside services, monument unveilings, and community gatherings.

The Memorial Centre

Shared remembrance is an important aspect of funeral and memorial. The Memorial Centre was designed accordingly as a protected space for community, comfort, and commemoration of life.

What services are offered?

- Funerals
- Graveside services
- Unveilings
- Community gatherings

Testimonial

"The Assembly Hall was a perfect venue for our service. It provides a much-needed space for those who may not have access to other facilities. Located at the cemetery, it saves a great deal of travel time and getting in and out of vehicles, which is especially important for the elderly. I am grateful we can offer this as an option to our members."
